Preconference 1: Recognizing and Responding to Children at Risk: Suspected Child Abuse & Neglect Education for School Nurses
3.0 CE Credits

As legally mandated reporters, school nurses are often the only voice for abused and neglected children. This American Academy of Pediatrics program models collaboration between health care providers and child protective services and takes an in-depth view of Pennsylvania law, risk factors, abusive vs. accidental injuries, the implications of truancy, reporting procedures and what to expect after a report is made. Presented by a pediatrician with expertise in child abuse evaluations and a Child Protective Services professional, the program also looks at the importance of having a child abuse protocol in the school setting. A Child Abuse Office Kit is provided to each participant. This program is approved for both Act 31 and Act 126 and is eligible for Act 48 and Act 58 credit. Presented by a pediatrician with expertise in child abuse evaluations and a former child abuse investigator, the program also looks at prevention strategies and provides each participant with a Child Abuse Office Kit.

Preconference 2: The Long and Winding Road: Working Together to Safely Transport Students To and From School

According to PennDOT, over 1.4 million students are transported by school bus in Pennsylvania each year, covering over 411 million miles! That means that many students with health concerns are riding on those buses every single day. School nurses are the keepers of health information. Are you tasked with sharing that information with the bus drivers? Who communicates with the bus contractor when a student with special needs is transported? What does that bus driver need to know? What can you tell him? These are some of the questions that we will discuss with our friends from the Pennsylvania School Bus Association. We will discuss HIPAA, FERPA, Emergency Action Plans and the ERIC Program.
